Roxanne Saffaie
Professional Fashion and
Entertainment Make-up Artist
California, USA

My career as a fashion and entertainment make-up artist allows me the opportunity to paint on many important faces. Like painting, beautiful make-up starts with a perfect canvas and the quality of the skin is a very critical component to the quality of work I deliver. Intraceuticals Infusion Treatments not only pamper my client's skin to reach a more healthy and beautiful state, but has also help me provide flawless make-up for both camera and stage.

As the key make-up artist on the American Idol concert tour, it is vital that our artist's skin remains radiant throughout all 3 months of performing and traveling across the US. Performing live on stage under hot lights can stress and a result can become prone to breakouts. Intraceuticals treatments have helped me combat that stress while keeping the skin and make-up of my clients such as Kristy Lee Cook, and Carly Smithson, glowing and always camera ready. By giving the oxygen treatments to my clients I have not only expanded their reliance on my skills as their make-up artist but, I have also helped them take great care of their skin.

Roxy's career has brought her to work on set with some of the worlds leading photographers such as Steven Klein, Hedi Slimane, Miles Aldridge, and Patrick Hoelck. Her work is featured through many outlets starting from NY and LA's fashion week runways, to editorials and ad campaigns in magazines such as in Vogue, Paper and Oyster.

Hollywood's prominent red carpet events with clients like Leighton Meester, Michelle Rodriguez, and Carly Smithson is a platform for her work as well. Roxy leads the makeup for the American Idol Concert tour and has also recently contributed her skills to Madonna's "Sweet and Sticky" tour. Roxy is a graduate of the prestigious artistic academy Christian Chauveau in Paris and currently divides her time between LA and NYC.
