Plump, Glowing Skin with the Intra

Many cosmetic firms claim that their products are endorsed by celebrities, leaving beauty buffs to wonder over the possibility of stars like Gwyneth Paltrow or Eva Longoria really adhering to so many beauty routines simultaneously. In this respect, the intra session of Etox, Restylara, collagen or vitamin injections, since it enhances the positive effects of these fillers.

So how does it all work? The Intra a moisture-binding cream (brimming over with anti-oxidants and containing a blend of essential oils such as jojoba, macadamia, sweet almond and wheat germ) and a Contour eye Gel, containing the active ingredient HWM (hyaluronic acid), meant with the ability to draw water continuously from the atmosphere. These additional moisturisers are applied because, although the facial pushes hyaluronic acid deep into the skin, surface areas also need to be hydrated, so they can form an effective barrier between your skin and free radicals.

I had one side of my face done first and was gobsmacked to find the ugly crease on that side of my mouth 'pumped up' and my eyelid, which can hang down and make me look grumpy, pleasantly 'filled'. The all-round glow further amused my interest and I asked the therapist how many sessions I would need before requesting her to work on the other side of my face (symmetry is everything, after all). The ideal course of treatments is six (one a week), followed by maintenance every four to six weeks. The treatment doesn't come cheap but it's definitely worth what you pay if you are after real results, which can be appreciated after just one go. It's not surprising that the oxygen facial is the choice of many ladies prior to a big day: a youthful, bright look, reduced pore size and a refreshed, dewy complexion, is surely the mark of a truly beautiful face. ☺
